

Jodie Hulm, RN, BSc Nsg, PGD Paeds

Jodie Hulm is an experienced paediatric perioperative nurse and continues to work clinically in the public perioperative sector in Australia. She is currently the Clinical Nurse Specialist (a Senior Registered Nurse role) for the Operating Theatre Department at Princess Margaret Hospital for Children in Perth, Western Australia. Jodie is a clinical leader in perioperative policy development, continuous quality improvement, leadership strategies and change management. Jodie has a Diploma of Management, a Post Graduate Diploma in Clinical Nursing (in Paediatrics) and a Post Graduate Certificate in Paediatrics. She is currently completing a Post Graduate Certificate in Nursing Leadership and Management also.

Jodie has represented paediatric perioperative nurses on the committee for the Operating Room Nurses Association of WA (ORNA) and is a current member of the Australian College of Operating Room Nurses (ACORN). Jodie has an active interest in surgical plume minimisation and is engaged in implementing a policy to ensure mandatory surgical plume evacuation in all paediatric operating theatres in her health service. She has previously researched and audited surgical plume exposure risks and presented her findings at National and State conference levels in Australia to her perioperative peers. Jodie continues to advocate for clean air for all and would like to see a National Mandate created for all Australian health providers.
